EDITOR'S TABLE.

The Illustrated London News of Feb. 23d has a wood-cut of the grandly restored premises, in Cornhill, of our London agents, Messrs. G. Street and Co. The style of the architecture is Italian classic, with rich ornamental carvings on the lower parts, in keeping with the Renaissance work. As our head-quarters here are rather the reverse of palatial, it is some consolation to know that our London agents have such a princely business mansion, in which we wish them increased luck and prosperity.

The Argentine Consul in Genoa reports that the total number of emigrants from that port last year was 44,036—31,120 for this country; 8,473 for Paraguay; 7,940 for Brazil; and 1,603 for other South American States. The Italian has taken Paraguay in hand, and its future is secure.

We were enveloped in mists yesterday, amongst them Mauritanian people. The French are not making as much way in Madagascar as they have done in China. The Hovas are not crushed yet. Now that Khartoum has fallen and we are all painfully anxious to know whether Chinese Gordon's head is still on his shoulders, the following brief particulars about the city on the Nile are doubly interesting:—Khartoum, situated on the west bank of the Nile, nearly at its junction with the White Nile. Formerly the houses were mostly constructed of millet stalks and scattered over a wide area; but now civilization has brought many changes to this town. The principal public edifices are the Mosque, the Military Hospital and the Bazaar. The chief objects of commerce are slaves, gold, ivory, gums, medicinal plants, ostrich feathers, giraffe and leopard skins—all brought from the interior by caravans or boats; and cloths, cottons, saddles, bridles, tea, sugar, soap, shoes, crockery and hardware from Europe via Alexandria and the Nile. The climate of Khartoum is certainly unhealthy. Its inhabitants are a mixture of Arabs, Berbers and negroes, with a few Turks, Persians and Europeans. The town is of recent growth, having sprung up since the conquest of Nubia and Senaar by Mohamed Ali.

It is related by the Press that a man named Sunday Mass (Domingo Masso) was pursuing his way home some nights ago, when he was suddenly brought to a standstill by the alarming appearance of two gentlemen with cocked revolvers waiting to go off. Before he could so far recover as to offer any resistance, his pockets were completely emptied, resulting in a discovery of 120%, which speedily became the property of the finders. The officer obtained, he was permitted to proceed. There is no intelligence of the loss having affected Mr. Sunday's reason. Suicide in such a case would be the merest folly.

An Italian goes every year to Olavarría, during the sporting season, to buy pastures, out of which he makes a considerable business by selling them in this city. Last year 240,000 birds passed through his hands. One cheer more for the Italians!

Another volume of "Rosas and his Times" has just been given to day light by the talented historian, Señor Saldaña. It is a very comprehensive, considering that it treats in part of the Socialistic movement of 1837, and is of great importance in the ranks of Argentine literature.

Two soldiers of the line were shot in Chile for murdering their captain. Up to the last moment this fellows displayed the greatest nonchalance, walking to the fatal spot with cigars in their mouths and jesting with their comrades.

There was a big house last night in the Politeama to see the last of "A Night in Pekin," and it was a 1. The Car. Bros. have done a good deal for the Circus cause, as many now prefer going there to any other theatre in town.

The Manklyn has brought out a large consignment of new notes for the National Bank from the New York Bank Note Co. The old paper dollar is getting very scarce now in the city, and the specimens of it still in circulation are of the most deplorable complexion. Nevertheless, the female population clinging to it with desperate tenacity, and refuse their favour to cents of either paper or copper.

The new Spanish tenor, Sr. Gayarre, who has taken Paris by storm, is the son of a blacksmith, and the story goes that he first rehearsed the arias choros at his father's forge. With the exception of Mario, all the tenors are of common origin. Campanini was a blacksmith, Caponni was a shoemaker and Brignoli was an organ-grinder.

In reference to the recent "Krach" in Wall-street, a New York "Herald" has published the following story: "The story goes that he first rehearsed the arias choros at his father's forge. With the exception of Mario, all the tenors are of common origin. Campanini was a blacksmith, Caponni was a shoemaker and Brignoli was an organ-grinder."
